Justice and Development Party has won the most votes and the most seats in the parliamentary election, winning an expected sweeping victory in Turkey's landmark vote Sunday, cementing the party's hold on power. The results marked a political comeback for Prime Minister

Recep Tayyip Erdogan, who took over as party leader in 2002 and went on to create a governing framework that has amplified his political power. With 95 percent of the ballots counted, the ruling Justice and Development Party, or AKP, of Erdogan had 46.6 percent of the votes and 315 seats in the 550-seat parliament, according to state-run Anadolu news agency. The Nationalist Movement Party, or MHP, of former Prime Minister Bulent

Ecevit had 17.3 percent of the votes and 111 seats, according to state news media. The far-right Nationalist Movement Party of Devlet Bahçeli received 12.6 percent of the votes and 73 seats. With the center-right, pro-Kurdish
